

Making a complaint about

We want to know what you think about the services we provide.

We don't always get it right.

This is why we have written this leaflet

We want to know:

What is bad about our service
This is what we call a complaint

You have a right to make a complaint

Tell us what is wrong and we will try to put it right

We will learn from your complaint

It will help us make our service better

Remember:

If you make a complaint it will be private.

You may want to complain about the help we gave you

If we said something you did not like

If you think we let you down

If we did not give the help you needed

What happens when you make a complaint to Victim Support?

Dealing with simple complaints

- Sometimes a complaint is easy to sort out.
- A local manager will talk to you and try to fix what went wrong.
- We call this a 'simple complaint'.

Dealing with more complicated complaints

- Sometimes a complaint is more difficult to sort out.
- We call this a more complicated complaint.
- We will look at it with you to solve the problem.
- Someone who does not take sides at victim support will help you with this.
- They may talk to you about your complaint on the phone or in a meeting with you.

What happens after you make a complaint?

We will let you know within five days that we have your complaint.

We will let you know if we need to talk to you and agree with you the best way to do this.

We will decide a time with you to let you know what we have done.

It can take up to 30 days for us to sort everything out and write our report to you.

We will explain what we have done about your complaint. We will let you know what we need to do to learn from it.

How to appeal if you are still not happy after making a complaint to Victim Support

If you don't feel we treated your complaint properly you can ask us to look at it again.

- This is called an appeal.
- You can contact us in the same way as you did before.

A senior manager will look into what we did, to make sure we did everything fairly and properly.

The decision that the senior manager makes is final.

You are allowed to see the information we keep about you

We hold some information about you on our computers.

We only share personal information with others after asking you if that is ok.

You can ask to see the information we keep about you. If you want to do this, you must write to your local Victim Support office.
